ELBERFELD STILL LEADS AMERICAN LEAGUE IN BATTIN

Twenty-two Now Hitting Three Hundred or Over

Wakefield and Altizer Hold Their Places With Elite, Anderson Having Slightly Slumped. Hickman Second in Slugging.

The first three places in batting averages are still held by Elberfeld, Stone and Lajole, with .388, 382, and .363, respectively. Elberfeld's mark, through has, of course, remained unchanged Stone has dropped two points since last week and Lajote three. Twenty two men, two less than last week, are batting above .300.

Of those who are clouting the leather the elite class, Altizer and Wakefield are the only Washingtonians, Anderson having gone from .301 to .290. Cross seems unable to get out of the eighties, and has risen but two numbers above his .282 of last week. Hick-man's stick work has improved the past week almost as much in compari-son as it did the week before when he made the remarkable jump of some thirty points. He now has .277 against Jones has jumped from .247 to .260. Nill, Kitson, Schlafly Hughes, Falkenberg, and Kittredge have all lost several points. The others are about in the same position as las week, Patten, as usual, being as near the bottom as he can get without de priving Patterson, of Chicago, of the Hickman Still Second in Slugging.

Cleveland has forged ahead of New York in club batting, and leads the Highlanders by but one point. Washington is still fifth on the list, the same position held by the home club in long hits. Hickman has but two more extra bases to his credit than this time las week, but is still second to Davis, o the Athletics, who has a big lead ove everyone else in individual slugging.

In base running. Niles and Nill are still leading the bunch, with .333 and .314, respectively. Donovan, of Detroit, is third, just one figure below Nill. Schlafly, who was next to last last week, with .270, is now at the bottom, with an average of .250. Altizer and Schlafly are still the only ones of the homefolk to be good enough to be classhas dropped to third place, leaving Elberfeld at the top, and Wee Willie

Patten Comes Forth.

Patten has left all of our twirlers in the van, and is now in eighteenth place. He was down much lower than this last week. Falkenberg, who was twelfth seven days ago, is now thirtieth. Plank has at last slipped up, and is at the head of those who have made errors, and fifth to Coombes, Glaze, Townsend, and Leroy, who have yet to make a miscue in the fielding line. Smith and Kitson are down among the forties, with Hughes at the end. Among the back-stops, Schmidt, O'Connor, and Schreck are leading, with Wakefield and Heydon bringing up the van. Stahl is in his former place, at seventh in fielding his position. Lajole is at the old stand at the top of the second basemen's col-umn, and Schlaffy is third to Lowe, of Cross is fifth on the list of third sackers, and Altizer and Nill are the last shortstops in the matter o about midway among the fielders, and Stanley is last. Washington is third from the bottom in club fielding. Armbruster, Kohler, and Jackson have yet to make a blunder in fielding. Averages and pitching feats follow:

PLAYED A GAME OF CRAP

"He wo' man swaller tail cote to a crap game. Dat's what he done, jedge, and he wa'nt satisfied wid dat so he took and pawned it."

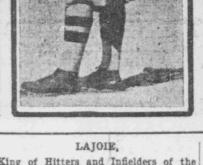

This was the complaint George Jones, colored, made to Judge Kimball in the Police Court yesterday against Mason Smith, also colored; charged with the larceny of a $25 garment.

Mason explained that he and Jones had often worn one another's clothes and he thought it was all right to wear the frock to a dance and fostival which he attended with a woman. The court did not see it in that light and imposed a penalty of $30 fine or three months in jail in default. Judge Kimball added that if restitution of the coat was not made Smith could consider himself Warden Harris' guest for two months more.

GROUNDS FOR RETIREMENT

Courtney's action may be intended as a feeler upon the pulse of the Cornell graduates. When he was at Poughkeep, sie this year there was no intimation that he intended parting from the school that had made him famous. Some unkind people here are asserting that Courtney, who loves to bask in the limelight, is only taking such a step to keep before the public. He certainly does like notoriety, and they claim that the standing is the man that gets the material. Critics should not be inclined to place too much faith in the resignation of Courtney, however, until later on in the year, when it will be definitely known just what the trouble is. Courtney's action may be intended as

CORNELL MAY LOSE as Columbia failed? Hanlon was the are over. main stay of the Blue and White, and then a shift was made to Jasper Good-win, a graduate, and since that time ROWING SUPREMACY Columbia has been fighting to keep out of last place always at Poughkeepsie. The stroke the Columbia men are row-ing is not the same. It is a quick, jerky stroke which can never win a race unless the men are unusually pow-

All Difficulties.

The announcement that Courtney, Cornell's crack coach, had severed his connection with the Red and White rowing circles met with a great many comments here in the Capital City.

For over twenty-five years the wizard beings. During the greater part of that rowed like machines rather than human beings During the greater part of that time he has labored earnestly to perfect his stroke, and under him, at Cornell. the technique of the game has reached a high point. On his account, rather than for Cornell's sake, many have gone to the college at Ithaca. The had at his command has been of the finest. Seasoned oarsmen have placed themselves under his eye, and have been developed into winning eights.

Reason for Withdrawal.

The reason for his withdrawal has not een announced to the public at large, but the inference is that conditions are not as favorable to him as they should be; that is, graduate manager conditions, which could be easily remedied. Courtney has every reason to be satisfied with his work, and like other men who have achieved the greatest success, it is possible that he has become somewhat

When the Cornell crew reaches the classic course on the Hudson, the first word that is passed around up there, and the first query that is directed to the boathouse below the Highlands, where Cornell's quarters are located, is "What sort of a crew has the old man." The watermen at Poughkeepsie keep their eyes on his eights and fours, for they know that he not only follows the boats, but has the water conditions down to a fine point. In 1905, it was Courtney's instructions that sent the eight in the varsity race out in the middle of the stream, thereby getting the best of the exceedingly fast current that was running at that time. This year, a week or so before the race, Courtney raised a tremendous kick about the way the marks on the bridge were placed These marks designated the courses the crews would follow and pointed the various arches the coxswains should pass

Keep Eye on Course.

Courtney discovered that the course over which the men representing Cor-nell would follow was just the least bit too near the stone pier. He protested most vehemently and insisted that Cornell would not row unless its course was put farther in the stream. Chairman Bangs, of the stewards' commit-tee, made an investigation and found that there was a slight backwash from the pier that might have a tendency to throw the frail racing eight out of plumb or off the keel. It was but another of Courtney's moves to secure the best possible advantage for his crews. Courtney is a man who will brook no interference and wants absolute sway. He has tendered his resignation, in all likelihood, because he was hampered in IN ANOTHER MAN'S COAT some way and would not continue under such conditions. Some years back there
